

Data network solutions from Vodat International

Every physical venue needs a robust, reliable network on which to run its digital devices and those of its consumers

The connected customer experience is reflected at numerous points throughout the purchasing and ordering journey, bringing multiple network challenges for companies.

Whether it's sales associates utilising tablets to deliver product or menu information, or through offering customer Wi-Fi, merchants' networks must support a growing number of devices and platforms in their physical environments.

Organisations need to consider if their communications infrastructure is powerful enough to deliver adequate connection speeds – securely and consistently – to ensure they are achieving their commercial- and customer-related goals.

How does it work?

Vodat International's data network solutions benefit from the company's long-term partnerships with major UK and international carriers.

Every circuit request is analysed to provide the most cost-effective option, and built to offer resilience, speed and high bandwidth at all levels.

Vodat can provide a high performance MPLS (WAN) network, built across multiple data centres that use enterprise hardware and an array of tier one carriers to provide the service merchants need.

Meanwhile emerging SD WAN technology – which compliments MPLS – could be ideal for deploying connectivity to multiple international locations linking back to the UK without giving up central management.

Going international?

Just as domestic customers demand the seamless integration of digital tools and processes in their purchase journey, so too do foreign audiences – sometimes to an even greater extent

Many UK organisations are looking to international territories for their next stage of growth – and the same level of infrastructure investment is required abroad as it is at home.

To support businesses' expansion across the globe, Vodat is able to provide a variety of options for connectivity in multiple markets – through leveraging its close partnerships with international carriers and network operators.
